

Plan of London in the reign of Queen Anne

HOMANN, Johann Baptist.

Accurater Prospect und Grundris der Königl: Gros-Britanisch: Haupt und Residenz Stadt London...

Nuremberg, c.1705. Original colour. 485 x 560mm.

£2,600

An early 18th century town plan of London with a prospect of the City from Southwark running underneath, with extensive keys for both. In the top corners are inset elevations of the Palace of Whitehall and Edward Jarman's Royal Exchange, built after the Great Fire and itself burned down in 1838. The elevations of St Paul's Cathedral are still an artist's impression.
