

The Netherlands during the Anglo-Dutch War of 1672

DU VAL, Pierre.

Provinces-Unies des Pais-Bas connues sous le nom de Holande, avec les Confins de Flandres et d'Alemagne, où elles sont des Places, et les Bancs de sable qui sont sur les costes.

Paris: Du Val, 1672. Original outline colour. 405 x 550mm. With rare letterpress text sheet.

£900

A scarce map of the Netherlands, with a title cartouche of a sea battle referencing the Third Anglo-Dutch War (1672-4), in which England and France united to attack the Dutch Republic. The allies failed to capitalise on their superior fleets, and eventually this costly and fruitless war (in which England temporarily lost New York) was abandoned by Charles II because of Parliamentary opposition.
