A fine example of the map of the post roads of central and east Europe, from London and Paris in the west, to Hamburg and Kalingrad in the north, Kiev and Bucharest in the east, and Constantinople and Naples in the south. Down the left side of the top left sheet are supplemental strips showing the roads from Paris to Madrid and from Milan to Madrid; opposite are Kaunas to Moscow and Vilnius to Moscow. Bottom left are engraved 'Remarques'; bottom right is a list of empire, kingdoms, grand duchies, etc. This map was published in 1812, the year of Napoleon's disastrous Russian offensive; in 1816 it was reissued with changes according to the Congress of Vienna and the Treaty of Paris that ended the Napoleonic Wars. .
